^aDue to the constantly changing COVID-19 pandemic, some policies documenting the suspension of in-person EI services and/or approval of telehealth services for EI providers have been revised or archived on some official state websites. These states are left blank above.

^bAlthough almost all states issued "stay-at-home" directives, only some states specifically mentioned the states' EI program. As such, individual EI programs across some states were responsible for making decisions about the provision of in-person visits during the COVID-19 pandemic. These states are indicated by an "n/a" response.

^cStates that list "0" days indicate that there was no delay (i.e., telehealth was immediately available as an option for families/service providers who wanted to use it). In some instances, telehealth was announced as an option before in-person EI visits were formally suspended.
